It is here that a fight breaks out between Satyaki and Kritavarma, and it is here that the Yadavas meet their end. (For the previous post in this series, see Episode 58: Dhritarashtra Dies. Arjuna will come to rescue them in due course.’ But as the prince proceeds a short distance in the direction of the city, an iron bolt appears in the sky, and rotating around its own axis like a hunter’s mallet, crushes the skull of Babhru and kills him on the spot. He then begins to recall some of the celestial weapons with which he fought the war of Kurukshetra, but none of them come to his mind. The mighty bowmen among the Vrishnis try to shoot him down whenever they spot him, but none of their arrows hurt him, and night after night he returns, swarming the streets with rats and cracking their earthen pots. At the same time, they exhort the people of Dwaraka to hurry on their way to the ocean. ‘Your elder brother has gone somewhere, sir,’ he says. ‘The fourteenth lunation has been made the fifteenth by Rahu once more,’ he says, pointing to the sky. They manage to rob a large number of women as well, along with gold and cows. Just be contented that they were once yours.’ After hearing this message, Arjuna takes his leave from Vyasa and sets out to Hastinapur. This Vajra, the grandson of Krishna, will be made your king in the city of Indraprastha. Request you to please resolve this ASAP. ‘I am a sinner!’ he says. ‘Such a day has happened before at the time of the great battle of the Bharatas. The Kuru prince sees the husband of Devaki lying prostrate on the ground in his chamber, beaten and burning with grief. ‘If you proclaim yourself a warrior, O Saineya, then why did you kill the unarmed Bhurishrava after he had given up his weapons and assumed the pose of meditation?’ Krishna oversees this quarrel in silence, and looks out at the darkening sky. On the seventh day from this, we will set out.’ During the seven days, Arjuna sees to the rituals of many dead Vrishni warriors, and witnesses many wives willingly climb onto their husbands’ funeral pyres. At about this time, a hunter by name Jara enters that part of the woods, desirous of shooting a deer. That blessed one with a plough will enter the ocean, and Hrishikeshya will be shot through the foot by the arrow of a hunter named Jara.’ After passing their curse, the sages seek an audience with Krishna and inform him of the matter. (This is supposed to be an evil omen.) Only Krishna and Balarama are still living righteous lives. It is Time that gives, and it is Time that takes away. Arjuna Arrives Meanwhile, Daruka reaches Hastinapur with Krishna’s message, and brings Arjuna back to Dwaraka. Seeing that they have to be fought off, Arjuna strings his bow, but he realizes that it feels heavier in his hand. Seeing that city look like a woman bereft of her husband, the third Pandava is shocked at the amount of destruction that has taken place. Further Reading If you liked this post, you may find these interesting also: Enjoy! ‘Forbear, you sinful wretches!’ he says. He throws away his weapon and falls at Krishna’s feet. Wives are said to deceive husbands, husbands are said to deceive wives, and when fires are ignited, we are told that they only cast their flames to the left. In a few seconds, he takes his last breath, and his soul leaves his body and ascends directly to heaven. Krishna continues to kill the Vrishnis in the hundreds and thousands, until Daruka comes and stops him. Equip all your cars and place on them all your wealth. Let me now go and spend the rest of my life in penance in the company of my brother. In it, a woman of black complexion and white teeth enters their houses and runs through the streets, snatching from men the auspicious threads that hang by their waists. With the sages chanting verses in his honour and with Gandharvas singing his praises, and with Indra joyfully announcing his return, Krishna, the eighth avatar of Vishnu, enters heaven and takes his place among the celestials. Later I have triedto open the recent episode of balarama. Arjuna prepares to fight them off, but then he is no longer the warrior he once was. The Pandavas are now convinced that the time has come for them to embark upon their own final journeys. At the same time, he sends out an announcement that no one in the kingdom is allowed to manufacture wine or any other intoxicant. He then sits down on the bare earth, recollecting the words of Gandhari. Mistaking Krishna’s foot for an animal’s, he shoots an arrow through the heel of the prince of Dwaraka, drawing a stream of blood. He orders the iron bolt to be reduced to fine powder, and for the powder to be mixed into the ocean. At the outskirts of the forest, Balarama awaits me. Seeing his enemies defeating him so easily, Arjuna once again proclaims out loud about the power of destiny, and resigns to thinking that he had been punished for some unseen sins. Journey to the Seashore The Vrishnis, surrounded by many black omens, adopt a wicked way of life, characteristic of people who expect to be killed soon. But I will come back.’ Balarama Dies He enters the city of Dwaravati and seeks out his father, Vasudeva. Ornaments and umbrellas and standards and armour are seen to be taken away by this Rakshasa, and in their very sight, the discus of Krishna, given by Agni, rises to the firmament and disappears. You will rue this rash act when I pierce your bodies with my weapons.’ But the robbers disregard the words of Dhananjaya, and set about plundering all the gold and cows they can find. ‘I shall take away with me the remnants of the Vrishni and Andhaka tribes,’ he says. ‘Thirty six years ago, Yudhishtir noticed the same omens surround him in the battleground, and then it foretold his victory and the destruction of the Kurus. A son or a daughter?’ The three sages can easily see through the disguise. One by one he hurls them at the fighting men, and each time a missile makes contact, it leaves only a charred black spot in its wake. ‘Gather all the ladies of court in one place, Father,’ he says, ‘and wait for the arrival of Arjuna from Hastinapur. Let us therefore make a pilgrimage to the ocean’s shore, and let us bathe in the sacred waters.’ A Strange Dream Around this time, as the city makes preparations to obey Krishna’s command, the Vrishni women begin to see a strange dream. As waves crash against the walls of Dwaraka and crush them into dust, as the shark-filled ocean swallows the city’s structures and the departing citizens quicken their pace. ‘I think we should follow him.’ Krishna finds Balarama Daruka, Krishna and Babhru leave that spot immediately in an attempt to track down Balarama in his retreat. ‘The sea will soon engulf the city. Seeing these omens, the Vrishnis descend into sinful behaviour which hastens their end. No last words are exchanged between the brothers. After pleasantries have been dispensed with, he tells Arjuna: The mighty warriors of the Vrishni and Andhaka tribes have met their death in accordance with the Brahmanas’ curse. The son of Pritha, with his eyes filled with tears, touches the feet of his maternal uncle. The final procession that sets out of the city on the seventh day is a huge one. Balarama also joins in the carnage, helping Krishna annihilate his own countrymen, and as all the Yadava heroes – Charudeshna, Aniruddha, Samba, Gada – hit the ground lifeless, Balarama leaves the place in disgust. Vasudeva tries to smell the head of Arjuna, but fails to do so because of the extreme fatigue he has subjected his body to in order to welcome death. ‘I will avenge the deaths of Dhristadyumna and Shikhandi and the five sons of Draupadi, O Krishna,’ he proclaims. As per his brief, he visits the ladies’ chambers and meets with all the important women. ‘The Andhakas, the Bhojas and the Vrishnis will all perish with the exception of Balarama and Krishna. How can a city, he thinks, that had the rule of the universe as its protector be routed in this manner? Causing this man to be dressed as a pregnant woman (with a milkstone under his garment), a bunch of louts attempt to play a trick on the sages.’ This Kritavarma has lived long enough in the land of men. Vasudeva dies shortly afterward, and Arjuna makes arrangements for the funeral. The developer does not collect any data from this app. Krishna knows that the body of Balarama is now but a shell, and his essence, that snake, would in due course be welcomed into the world of the Nagas with great honour. ‘What sort of Kshatriya kills his enemies when they are asleep? Balarama is the most cherished children’s magazine in Malayalam, and the largest selling in India. These robbers attack the settlement, not knowing that they are being protected by Arjuna. If Manorama can include the nostalgic versions of Balarama for 90’s kids then that would be great. Satyaki springs to his feet with a sword in hand. That is the nature of Time. Krishna allowed himself to suffer through the calamity even though he was competent enough to stop it. As these dreams accost all the people of the city, they move as one toward the shore, and they set up a massive encampment on Prabhasa, overlooking the sea. A number of Apsaras appear on the horizon and take away the chariot of Balarama as well, with its Palmyra banner, equipped with maces and the plough. A white snake is in the process of exiting from Balarama’s mouth, a naga of a thousand heads with a form as great as a mountain, endued with red eyes. The island-born sage is expecting the Pandava. Krishna now steps into the fore, and uproots a clutch of grass blades that turn into iron bolts in his hands. Everything that you achieve in this life, O Dhananjaya – wealth, prosperity, skill, renown, friendship – they are all given as loans. A list of topics that we will cover: Curse of the Three Sages It so happens that about thirty six years after the events of Kurukshetra, three sages – Kanva, Vishwamitra and Narada – arrive together in Dwaraka, to be welcomed by some Vrishni heroes, among whom is a man named Samba, one of the sons of Pradyumna. ‘The hour has come for the Pandavas to relinquish their thrones and go in search of their deaths. For more information, see the developer’s privacy policy. While the city is grappling with its fate, the embodied form of Time (Kala) visits the houses of Dwaraka every day. Vyasa Explains After the Vrishnis have been rescued, Arjuna goes to Vyasa in search of answers. Krishna stands aside and watches the serpent as it slithers away toward the ocean. ‘How subtle is the way of fate!’ exclaims Arjuna, as he leads them to the land of five rivers and sets up an encampment in the midst of a land abounding with corn and cows. ‘As for your own weapons, they were given to you for a purpose. O Prince. Krishna meets all the deities and accepts their worship. After attempting in vain to recall them, he tries to drive off the robbers with normal arrows, but he realizes that his quivers are no longer inexhaustible. Dwaraka Sinks Arjuna gives the people of Dwaraka seven days to pack and leave. Now that the purpose has been fulfilled, they have been taken away from you. The attack ends up being very successful for the robbers, because they come away from it with minimal casualties, and a lot of looted wealth. A Fight Erupts The text does not mention it explicitly, but there is a hint that the water of the ocean – in which the iron bolt was dissolved – begins to have strange effects on the Vrishnis. He looks like a man of terrible aspect: bald, dark and tawny. To Babhru he says, ‘Go and protect the ladies of Dwaraka. ‘At the end, you come into this life alone, and you must leave it alone as well. He breaks down and weeps in front of Rukmini, Satyabhama, Devaki and the other Vrishni women. Krishna watches this without any reaction, and after spending a short moment in silence, he tells Balarama, ‘I will go and see to the ladies’ care, Brother. After mutely watching the degeneration of his clan for a while, Krishna decides that it is time for it to end. Dwaraka thus enters a period of forced prohibition on wine due to Ugrasena’s order. With their eyes blazing in anger, they say that Samba will bring forth a fierce iron bolt that will bring about the destruction of the Yadavas. So do not grieve the loss of your powers. The chariot, along with the four great horses, is also engulfed by the sky. ALL IT TAKES IS YOUR MAGICAL TOUCH TO ENTER THE MAGIC WORLD! How does The Balarama’s iPad Subscription feature work? Arjuna is Defeated As robbers surround the Dwaraka camp, Arjuna holds aloft his Gandiva and issues a warning to their attackers. ‘If you love your lives, you will leave us alone. I had no idea that you were here. O lord.’ But Krishna comforts the hunter, telling him that it is all part of the writ. It contains of Brahmins, Kshatriyas, Vaishiyas and Sudras segregated as per their orders, with Arjuna leading the sixteen thousand women that made up Krishna’s harem. Close on their heels are also the thousands of women who have been suddenly widowed by the fight on the seashore. This happens with such chilling suddenness that for a moment, no one can believe their eyes. ‘Whatever has been ordained has happened. He does not attempt to chase the robbers and free the women that they have taken away; instead, he orders his men to focus on the remaining Vrishni people, and to get them safely to Hastinapur. Today, it is our turn. Thus, the Bhojas and the Vrishnis begin to fight, but the latter are so outnumbered that they get slaughtered. He lets out a breath, and looks around for a tree to lean on. Escaping Destiny However, Ugrasena is determined to try fighting the course of destiny. They find him at a distance in the woods, reclining in thought against a tree. Of all the different ways in which one can kill one’s enemy, this is the lowest! No wonder, O Kritavarma, that the Yadavas do not think of you as much of a hero.’ Kritavarma, himself balancing a goblet of wine in his hands, rises to his feet. When he leaps out of the bushes, he is surprised to see a yellow-clad man rapt in meditation. I cannot bear to see this city deprived of all the heroes that had once built it.’ Touching Vasudeva’s feet with his hands, Krishna returns to the forest, even as walls of sorrow assail him from the women’s chambers. You must not grieve for them. As the string of carts leaves the city, the sea begins to encroach upon its shore. As soon as they spot him, Krishna sends Daruka off on a mission to carry the message of the Vrishni massacre to Arjuna. The ladies sit down next to the fallen Pandava, and for a while they reminisce about the past days of glory, before Arjuna gets up and goes to visit Vasudeva, the father of Krishna.
